Where di.d the Summer of '88 go? perhaps more Or, appropriately, where did you go this summer? A lot of us were out and about attending one of the many Diplomacy cons and tournaments held all over the world. We'll be looking at some of the best of them: Last summer's AUSTRALIAN DIPLOMACY CHAMPIONSHIP, DIXIECON ATLANTICON, DIPCON XXI, AND WORLD DIPCON I. In our travels we'll learn more about those infamous CADS who continue to add to their list of con triumphs. journey on England's motorways roundabouts with Allan Calhamer, and ponder how an English constable became the Avis of the British Diplomacy hobby.

Two variants this time; one fairly simple and one rather psychic in character. A trio of items from Mark Berch En joy. an essay on Germany from Melinda Bob Hartwig talks about his Holley. return to the hobby after a long spell. Linsey serves up the results of the 1988 Runestone Poll. And we finally finish the three-part updated INDEX AND MENU DIPLOMACY WORLD. There was a lot material left-over but because we had to print up our new catalogue of publications, a new DW flyer, and some other administrative items, we cut back a bit on the size of this issue.

Hard as it is to believe I've now finished three years as DW's publisher and editor. Where has the time gone? Fortunately, when I look at my bookcase I can see where a lot of it went-into I'm proud of the job the DW staff, and our contributing writers have done. And if nothing else the results of this year's tell us the hobby appreciates your ts as well. Looking back, I can efforts that while we haven't accomplished I would have liked, we have everythi.ng more than anyone would have far expected.

Let me remind a lot of you that your DW subs expire with this issue. A timely renewal would be appreciated since that saves me having to remind you to renew later—and guess how many copies of the next issue to print. And as you look through our Christmas Catalogue remember that it is the sale of DW publications that finances much of our work on the hobby's behalf.

I suppose after three years in this hobby hot seat I should have some profound observa tions for you. Unfortunately, I don't. When I took over DW I said that I hoped my jo would be finished in three years. That seems about as long as any DW publisher or edito has managed to survive before "burn out" struck. Well, the three years have come an gone and, surprisingly, I don't feel bothered by burn out at all. Perhaps it is becaus of all the positive support I've gotten from the hobby. Or maybe it's the constant challenge I get from trying to steer this leaky, old boat through the shark-infested water of Dippydom. Or maybe it's because I'm just a natural born paper-shuffler. Whatever I've never yet lacked for something to look forward to with this job. When that da comes I'll retire.

Speaking of retiring; I have completed arrangements to allow for the transfer of DW to another publisher-editor in the event something should happen to me. I think that is a prudent move, given the times in which we live. So, hopefully DW's future transfer will be a bit more orderly than they have been in the past. My feeling is that all we've done for DW in the last three years will go for naught if we cannot arrange for the success ful transfer of the magazine to another publisher.

Our immediate future for the next year or so is going t But what of the future? focus on the subject of conventions and tournaments in the hobby and particularly c DIPCON. As you know by now DIPCON XXII will be held in San Diego next July 28-30. The DIPCON Administration Committee of Ron Cameron, Ken Peel, and myself is determined t bring you the best DIPCON we can. But we're going to need your help to do it. We'r going to be spending a lot of time in the coming year looking at cons and tournaments How they are run. How they are scored. What their problems are. What their good point are. What things about them need to be changed. And what things need to be left alone Naturally we want your input, particularly if you have or plan t It's a big subject. host a con in the next year. We'll be spending space in DW on this subject and, wit luck, a new Anthology volume will offer a reprinting of all our past con and tournamer David Hood is working on a handbook for con hosts to use. We'll be doir a lot of theoretical discussions and, using DIPCON as a guinea pig, making a lot of har choices and testing their results next summer. We hope you'll join us in the zine ar at the event to see what comes of it all. Again, as you read through the enclosed Christma Catalogue keep in mind that your contributions now will have a big impact on what kir of event summer. We need your help.

Lots of interesting anniversaries popping up right now. Twenty years ago this fal I was in Prague when the Russians invaded that country to wipe out the "Prague Spring. How ironic that now one of the chief centers of resistance to Gorbachev's reforms i Prague. Leonard Bernstein is celebrating his 70th birthday and if you've never had chance to hear or see his famous Norton Lectures at Harvard find the tapes and dig ir It isn't easy listening but it will do you a world of good. Avalon Hill's The GENER/ is also celebrating an anniversary, it's 25th to be exact. Check out the flyer enclose for a way for you to join the party. And, while your at it, pick up a copy of KREMLII and let me know what you think of it. And finally we can't overlook that it has been 2 years since the dream became a myth. The hobby was in its infancy 25 years ago and I doubt if JFK ever played Diplomacy, although it's interesting to speculate that he might have But certainly his words, then as now, could have been addressed to hobby members. Kee them in mind as you read some of the stuff that is being published in the hobby at the moment. Ask yourself if anyone will be quoting those authors in 25 years.

"Let the word go forth from this time and place, to friend and foe alike, that the torch has been passed to a new generation of Americans."

"Let every nation know that we shall pay any price, bear any burden, meet any hardship support any friend, oppose any foeto assure the survival and the success of liberty."

"And so, my fellow Americans: Ask not what your country can do for you—ask why you can do for your country."

ONS:

Every year's con season brings its moments of triumph and its moments of defeat. his year was no exception. The big difference this year was that it was the con hosts nd tournament directors who seemed to take most of the hard knocks. A lot of cons this ear were not what was promised or expected of them. A lot of the smaller cons didn't et the attendance they expected and even DIPCON failed to attract the numbers it should Many of the tournaments suffered from poor management and record-keeping, and ther organizational and operational problems. All in all, we need to rethink the con nd tournament concept, and make some improvements. And we need to make them fast. Or else. had planned to devote most of this issue to this summer's con events and we come close. it a lot of the items we had planned to publish didn't show up so our summer portrait spotty in places. We're missing a report on ORIGINS, although four hobby members com Southern California attended. I understand its Diplomacy Tournament was a joke. other word describes it. Tom Moore ran off with the big prize at PEERICON this summer, Dan Sellers was supposed to write up a it didn't deliver his promised game report. PCON report from the champ's perspective, but it didn't get here. Nobody sent in a port on PUDGECON; which is too bad because it was probably one of the best cons held is year. And, of course, no report from CAN-CON, although I heard they were inted in their turn out. Well, so much for the negative.

The summer, and year, started off on a good note with the Australian National Diplomacy ampionship held 23-26 January, 1988, attracting a good crowd from all over the hobby Luke Clutterbuck reports on that event. Based on that event I would say Australian hobby has every right to participate in the WORLD DIPCON rotation pattern. befully, in the years to come there will be more zines exchanged, more players crossing Pacific, and better ties between our hobbies.

The second DIXIECON came off over the Memorial Day weekend at its usual site, Chapel Once again the locals clobbered the visitors but a few visitors 1. North Carolina. Mark Stegeman came in first place, mostly because of his win as Russia. id Hood has the details.

Gen. John McCausland offers an interesting explanation of why and how the CADs are ng so well on the convention circuit. My impression is that their success is due one reason, they work at it. And just so you'll know what we're talking about when speak of the CADs and their record we've included a listing of some of them and their irkable series of triumphs.

David Hood offers a view of ATLANTICON, always one of the most entertaining cons ind, as he continues his travels around the hobby.

Mark Berch told me, even before I left, that the hobby wasn't interested in reading s and pages of Peeribleah about my travels this summer. Bless his heart. So I've ined myself to a few remarks about the cons I attended this summer. Since I was only person to attend both DIPCON and WORLD DIPCON they may be of some interest. the complete, uncensored version of what happened on my trip you'll have to see the ing in the Catalogue under SOUVENIRS OF PEERIJAVO. I guarantee that's much more

Most of the publishers who attended DIPCON in San Antonio have written something their adventures, although we're still waiting for the official report from P.J. van. Alan Stewart had a particularly amusing, if that's the word, report in PRAXIS. WORLD DIPCON I, in Birmingham, England, attracted a lot of publishers and their nts have appeared all over the hobby press. Fred Davis had his say. And Simon We offer Allan Calhamer's report on his trip and con experiences. nness had his. Phil Day was the winner, by a few points, of the WORLD DIPCON individual tournament. s a Ph.D. candidate in chemistry at an English university. Right behind him in umber two slot was Matt McVeigh, a constable from Birmingham. I had a chance to a game with Matt and I can testify he's a super player. What more can you ask I know. I know. A win of your own, of course. Well, maybe next time.

AUSTRALIAN DIPLOMACY CHAMPIONSHIP (23RD to 26TH JANUARY 1988)

Luke Clutterbuck, Tournament Gamemaster

On the final day of the Championships, Australia Day 1988, I am driving through Camberra to the venue at Bruce TAFE trying to compose a pretentious speech involving a tenuous link between the coming day's final and the bicentennial. I'm looking for a hook, a way in, a symbol when suddenly I see one. There. In the Nation's capital. Almost 200 years to the minute since the first white settlers arrived. A dead kangaroo in the middle of the road. I wind up the window, apply more weight to the accelerator and spend the rest of the journey convincing myself that I have a sore throat.

Great turnout — 38. Even better when you consider its 17 up on last year and that most of the other competitions at CANCON '88 were smaller this year because of the special four day competition and the bicentennial. We play five boards a day with social games in the afternoon for those eliminated early on. I keep the time deadlines and rule applications reasonably strict and in the end I think this makes for a tight, enjoyable championship.

Sunday 24th January: The day started like a nightmare when player shortages force me to play three boards at once - two England's and a Germany. To add to my difficulties France asks for alliance in one game, Germany in another and no one at all in the third! Thankfully reinforcements arrive after a few turns to relieve me of the responsibility but not before I manage to place a German army in Tuscany and two French armies in two different Wales (remember, I'm playing England!). The winners on Sunday are Peter Dydusiak's England, Robert Wessel's England, Ben Groenen's France, Ian Kaspura's Turkey and Andrew England's Austria with strong play from Harry Kolatas, Ian Castle, Alan Howard, Neil Ashworth, Neil Smark, Mike Floyd, Stephen Simmonds and Matt Gibson. Andrew England climbs the hitherto unscaled mountain to 18 centers in a tournament game. A devastating performance almost repeated by Ian Kaspura who is disappointingly thwarted by an agonizing mis-order on the second to last move. Players drift off in groups to seek out Camberra's high and low life and find they are it.

The game "Curtin" distinguishes itself by a flurry of "Big Casino." Not only are three or four sets of orders submitted for Paul Ward's Italy on the same turn but Ian Castle (France) is actually kidnapped by the Eastern alliance. When this plot fails owing to the fact that not even the hardest hearted Diplomacy player can be be be one of their kind locked up with Car Wars people, the French orders myster—ously disappear inside a Turkish kaftan. TRADITION CONTINUES DIXIECON II: THE boards and for running the mini-tournament.

David Hood

Memorial Day weekend 1988 again saw an influx of Diplomacy players into Chape The University of North Carolina, under the auspices of the Carolina Amateu Diplomats, hosted DIXIECON II, a two-day tournament for Diplomacy and variant gaming Once again, I had the pleasure of hosting the event and running the tournament.

The fun began on the Friday night before the Con, when we had unofficial gamir for early arrivals at the home of CAD secretary Mike Lowrey. There was a lively Tita game, involving Wisconsin's James Wall and Marc Peters, CAD member Chris Kremer, ar on in the form of a Diplomacy game. Participants included well-known PBM players Joh Crosby, and Mike Gonsalves, as well as the 1987 DIXIECON champ Morgan Gurley. The game ended in an Italian-German two-way, between Gonsalves and CAD member Mike Pinkerton.

CAD-Charlotte member Dan Sellers. In the other room, a deadly stab-fest was goir

Early the next morning, more Dipsters began to arrive, eventually filling to The first of these was concluded as a four-way draw, as Diplomacy games by 1100. strong Austrian-Turkish alliance was thwarted by English-French cooperation. PBMer Stan Plummer was able to stymie the advance of Austria and Russia, played by Sellers and Virginia FTFer Rob McCarter. The secon game of Round Two, Game D, was played at the same time the Gunboat tournament was raging It featured a strong French-German alliance facing a weak and divided east with r strong alliance bonds. Two full games were played under the expert gamemasterir of David McCrumb. The eventual winner was Raleigh, NC newcomer Andrew Chilton. Al decided that the game would probably make a good one with negotiations, but as a gumboa variant it was rather tedious. My thanks to McCrumb for his excellently drawn SkinnyDi

Game E prove to be a decisive one for Best Country awards: England and France swept to a two-wa and the Best Country Awards for their respective nations. Gonsalves and McCrumb wer able to prevent an eastern push to stalemate them, much to the chagrin of Kiker's Austri and Pinkerton's Turkey.

Game F decided the fate of the First Place Prize, as Mark Stegeman pulled of the only solo win of the tournament as Russia. Seller's Italy chose to attack Franc and Germany rather than Russia in mid-game, precipitating a move by myself and Wall' Germany to give Stegeman the win. Sellers came in second with ten centers. IN DIPLOMACY WORLD TIME

January's issue of DW will be a catch-up issue as we attempt to clear our files cumulated material that has been sent for publication in DW but never used. We'll begin our year long study of conventions and tournaments with a historical survey ese hobby institutions and a discussion of the challenges facing them today. Your For a change of pace we'll be looking at the subject of "The Civilized is welcome. nacy Player." Is there such an animal among us? Do you know anyone who deserves What about them makes them special? And, flipping the coin, we'll consider title? Wacko Diplomacy Player." I'm sure we can all think of examples of those. re they? And why are they that way? Again, join us. It should be enlightening.

SUBCONSCIOUS DIPLOMACY

Gen. John McCausland

There are many ways to approach the game of Diplomacy. Each region in the United States has developed their own particular style. The Californians boast about how much blood is shed during their Diplomacy conventions. The WARTHOGS believe a subtle finesse is the best way to gain a victory. The Madlads resort to threatening behaviour and Kamikaze attacks to cow their opponents into submission. Texans believe in brute force; while Melinda Holley believes in stable alliances. However, the most successful Diplomacy group in North America today uses none of these strategies. The Carolina Amateur Diplomats (CADs) have their own methods to achieve victory.

The CAD players burst onto the national Diplomacy scene in 1986 when they made their first appearance at the DIPCON held in Fredericksburg, VA. Their top player that year, Morgan Gurley, managed a dismal fifth place finish (in comparison to later years), but he did manage to secure two best country awards as Germany and Italy. The following year David Hood, CADs unofficial leader, won the DIPCON held in Madison, WI. Still not contented, another CAD member, Dan Sellers, traveled to San Antonio to win this year's DIPCON title.

There are several theories that explain thie success of the CAD players. The most popular concerns their belief that a second place finish is almost as good as a two-way draw. In striving for these second place finishes, they usually stumble into a draw, and occasionally even a win. Another popular theory has arisen based on the theory that Austria, Italy, and Germany are considered the best, as well as the easiest, countries to play by this group of individuals. If they can do good with these Powers; imagine what they can do with the other four. While these are excellent theories; unfortunately they are wrong. The reason that the face-to-face Diplomacy hobby is being squashed by CAD members is a result of their 'Grand Conspiracy.''

'The Conspiracy' began innocently enough early in 1986. David Hood, no one is quite sure how, discovered that there was going to be a National Diplomacy Tournament in neighboring Virginia. Thinking that it would be fun to have some new competition, he called his friend Morgan Gurley, and they made plans to attend together.

While our heros were having fun, they were not faring as well as they had thought they would. Morgan had managed to squeeze into a two-way draw as Germany, but otherwise they were shut out. The last round finally arrived Sunday morning, and to their total surprise, the boys were scheduled for the same game as England Italy. Not realizing the danger, the other players permitted Dave and Morgan to go off into a two-man huddle.

David: Morgan, I am tired of getting blown away. Last night I only lasted until 1904 as Turkey. I would like to have a good game for once.

Morgan: I agree. These guys play favorites too much. Do you know that in one game I was in they proped up Malc Smith because he was a foreigner, yet they tried to eliminate me. Luckily, I was able to eliminate those bozos that my one unit was critical to their defense...

David: True. Here is what we will do. You move Army Venice to ... and we should roll right across the board.

Morgan: Good idea. The victory might give me a chance at the championship, and your second place finish will help you also.

As we know, Morgan did not win that DIPCON, but his victory in the last game did propel him into fifth place. Even more important, it planted a seed in their minds; which they nutured on the drive home.

Morgan: That last game certainly was easy.

David: Yeah, I was surprised. You know, if we could get into every game together, we could win every Diplomacy convention in North America.

Morgan: Don't you think the other players would get suspicious when we always allied?

David. Of course they would.

Morgan: Then how do we get around it?

David: Easy, we convince everyone to ally with us, no matter what the situation.

Morgan: And how do you propose to accomplish that? Aside from Greene and Wilcox, don't know any other players that gullible.

By working on their sub-conscious. It would be a great experiment for the Psychology Department at University of North Carolina.

And so was born 'The Conspiracy." And as an offshoot and prime programming forum, DIXIECON was founded.

The scheme worked perfectly. Morgan not only won the first DIXIECON in spectacular fashion, but the people he stabbed thanked him for it. The programming was performed at DIPCON in Madison later that summer, and it allowed Dave to obtain the only solo victory at the tournament, propelling him into first place.

Flushed with success, the boys began planning for the next year. In an executive meeting of CAD, it was decided that Mark Stegeman would win DIXIECON that year; while

Dan Sellers would take top honors at DIPCON.

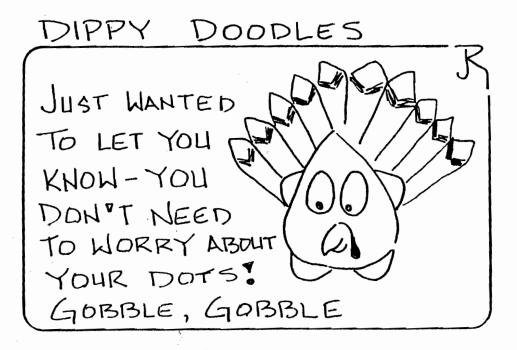

Things did not go as planned. The programming from the previous year was deeper than anyone had predicted. Everyone wanted to ally with Morgan. He breezed through both of his games with two-way draws. Mark could only win the tournament with a solo mictory. At that point, Dave figured out what was wrong, so he stepped in and made sure Mark won his last game.

After this major foul up, Dave was afraid to attend DIPCON that summer. There were sure to be different players, but just a few could throw the scheme off. DIXIECON and only been saved because Dave could affect the outcome, something he could not do t DIPCON as easily. To prevent any problems, Dave made up a few feeble excuses and id not attend.

Things went OK. Don won, as had been planned. The only disappointment was that IPCON would be in California next year instead of North Carolina. But that was expected, s programming for that vote was not done.

The big question on all gamers minds now is who will win the next DIXIECON and no will they set—up as the champion at DIPCON '89. If you attend, don't be surprised E you find yourself allying with someone from North Carolina for no logical reason, that you feel like voting DIPCON '90 to the wonderful guys from CAD.

DAVID HOOD

Given limited finances, I was forced to miss DIPCON in San Antonio this year. Instead, I led a group of CADs (Carolina Amateur Diplomats) north to Baltimore to attend the 'Diplomatic Congress of Baltimore," a Diplomacy tournament run by Robert Sacks in conjunction with the wargaming tournament known as ATLANTICON.

Fellow travelers Bob O'Deer, Mike Pinkerton, and Chris Kremer accompanied me into a murky unknown, filled with night-marish hex-gamers and mindless D&D fanatics. Wading through all those "freaks" (Bad Boys would have had a field day there) we finally found the comforting enclave of Dip players organizing for Round One of the two-round tournament

Lots of big names graced the tournament during that weekend, including people like John Caruso, Steve Arnawoodian, Dick Martin, Fred Davis, and, of course, Bob Sacks, the tournament director. It was interesting to meet the people behind the names—most turned out to be actual people. I still withold judgement on Melinda Holley, however—until I actually meet the lady I will continue to argue that there must be more than one person at that Huntington, WV address. No way one person could play in that many PBM games at once...

Oh, back to ATLANTICON. The first day saw six full boards—42 participants. In my game, my Turkey allied with Frank Jones' Austria to mount a crushing offensive against the western powers. Suffice it to say that by the end of the game, my yellow fleets were in the Norwegian Sea! Our two-way was not the only one of its kind, however—there was a 17-17 center draw between France and Austria on one board, and a French win on another.

After this grueling round, the four CADs retired to the lounge for some serious liquid refreshment. We made it back for the "Hobby Meeting," though, which was a hilarious display of "Much Ado About Nothing." The subject for debate was Sack's proposed "delisting" of Bruce Linsey, Fred Davis, and Fred Hyatt as "service providers" in his own zine! I thought he should just go ahead and do it, being his own zine and all, rather than try to obtain a consensus which would erroneously be described as a "Hobby Sanction." But at any rate, the whole controversy was essentially meaningless.

Which is not to say that I thought the meeting was a waste of time---I found it rofoundly entertaining...

Back to gaming. The Sunday round filled only three boards, although the competition as no less fierce. As Germany in my game, I was able to stab France for the victory n the End Game, just edging out my Austrian neighbor, Chris Kremer. Meanwhile, my uddy from yesterday, Frank Jones, proceeded to win his game also, beating me out of ne top spot by two supply centers from the previous game! Bill Thompson, the France in aturday's 17-17 draw, picked up third place in the tournament.

Sacks' scoring system was a bit weird—average supply center counts for the game ars make up one-half of the calculus. Also, Sacks himself was able to make gameding decisions if the time had run out. All-in-all, though, the tournament was well-n and highly enjoyable, if far too expensive...

One more thing. For all of you out there who thought that the 'NMR King' Jack Hugh didn't really exist (after all he never corresponds in any game I've been in th him), you're wrong. I met him at the Con, and he actually claims to have sent orders for one of his games.

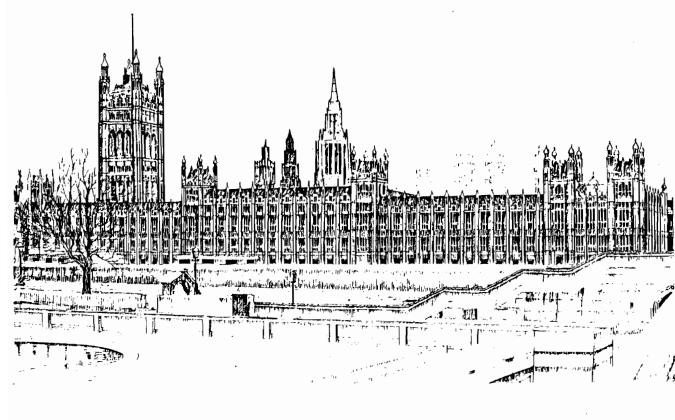

I'll believe it when I see it.

The Houses of Parliament

LARRY PEERY

I only have two pages so let me be brutally candid. The world of Diplomacy cons this summer was turned upside down. DIPCON XXI should have been WORLD DICON I. And vice versa. Instead we were treated to the spectacle of America's oldest and most prestigious Diplomacy event being up-staged by the newcomer on the world stage, WORLD DIPCON I. It's a bit like comparing the Alamo and the Palace of Westminster. Since I was the only person fortunate enough to attend both events you have to accept my word for it. And if my word here isn't enough for you, I refer you to my SOUVENIRS OF PEERIJAVO, as listed in the Holiday Catalogue.

Some people say it is unfair to compare DIPCON with WORLD DIPCON. I don't agree with that. I think the two should be compared. And, I'm afraid, the comparison does us no good. I can find no fault with the site, except for the heat; the staff, which did a fine job at the Con; or the Tournament, except for a few minor score-keeping errors; at DIPCON. What does upset me—to no end—was the lack of hobby support among its publishers and leaders for the event itself, and the failure of the hobby to attend. One player from New York? One player from California? Almost nobody from Texas? Come on, that's bad. When I told the people at WORLD DIPCON that there were only thirty-five people at DIPCON they looked stunned, then they laughed, and then they looked worried.

I played several games at the Con, turning in my usual sterling performances. My one good game didn't even count as part of the tournament. Oh well... Most of the time I had I spent watching Alan Stewart watch me eat. That was exciting. I also spent a lot of time, along with everyone else, keeping track of Morgan Gurley's body count. And then I got into a shouting match with Dan Sellers, who eventually won the tournament. That was fun. Still, I did get to see some old friends and meet some members of the DW family I hadn't met before. That made it worthwhile.

Still, when it was all over I had the feeling that I wasn't the only person asking myself, "Is that all there was?"

And then it was off to England. I had ten days or so before WORLD DIPCON and spent them drowning myself in British culture. It was fun.

WORLD DIPCON I was, by any standard, a success. The only American con I can recall ttending that rivaled it was DIPCON V in Chicago. The entire British hobby, with ne major exception, was there. The Con staff knew exactly what they were doing and, ore importantly, enjoyed doing it. That rubbed off on the participants. The site is very good---although the beds in the dorms must have been imported from a German alag. The food was abominable, but that was a good excuse to get out and explore me of the local restaurants. But it was the people that made the difference. I t dozens of people that I've corresponded with and known for years. And there were Dozens of them going on all the time. Had I wanted to I could have played mes non-stop for the entire four day weekend. And some people did. The charts tell Saturday's event consisted of the team competition with e story of what happened. My team, the International, consisted of Malc Smith, from everywhere; teams entered. nin Henry, from Belgium; Claude Gautron, from Canada; Lex Pater, from Holland; Fred ris, from the US; Jaap Jacobs, from Holland; and myself. Considering my rotten showing, did well to 'come in 11th out of 24. But what can you do when your surrounded by yers from teams like War & Peace, Scratch, Mouse Police, SLOBS, Liverpool, and Blood? hought things would be better during the individual tournament which fielded a mere Instead I got Austria and found a Mutt & Jeff pair on either side Ha! me, Kevin Hawthorn and Matt McVeigh. It took me three game years to figure out they were saying and by then I was in deep trouble. I'll let Matt tell you the details. Suffice it say I had a lot of fun in that game.

Anyone who saw me playing things like SHOGUN (didn't do too badly, thank you) NUCLEAR WAR (won two, tied two) probably wouldn't believe it, but that's the way it was. In fact that just about sums it up. The way it was was the way it should have been. When it was over I was left feeling that I hadn't met everyone I wanted to, that I hadn't played all the games I wanted to, and that I was totally exhausted from the experience; and ready to do it all over again the next weekend. If I had the time and money I'd fly over for the British winter event, MIDCON, just so I could thrash some of those people all over again.

I only heard one person start to say anything bad about anybody in the hobby, anywhere, and I quickly told Fred to be quiet. I didn't want the Brits hearing about the Bad Boys. We have enough to be embarassed about as it is. Instead I saw a table full of Diplomacy magazines and other gaming pubs brought to the con by their CMs, any one of a dozen of which could easily have topped this year's RP. And the second day there was another table full. I talked with project worker after project worker working on all kinds of interesting projects for the British hobby. Some of their ideas a bit weird perhaps, but what the hell? Game designers were hawking their wares and doing well at it. It was, above all, an example of a unified hobby having a good time. It proves, I think, that it can be done. Compare that with San Antonio.

Simon Billenness is very concerned about WORLD DIPCON II and where it will be held in North America in 1990. As I've made it clear—I hope—I am more concerned about the state of DIPCON next year. And looking ahead to 1990 I can only say that we, as a hobby, have a lot of work to do before we can host a successful WORLD DIPCON.

If you are planning on bidding for that event please keep that in mind.

I learned a lot from WORLD DIPCON and I intend to put some of those lessons to use next year in San Diego. But the one thing I can't do is turn out the numbers. That's up to you. And after all, don't you want to be here just so you can see me make a fool of myself?

It is easy for me to criticize DIPCON and praise WORLD DIPCON. Too easy, perhaps. No doubt some will say I am whining, and perhaps I am. I learned that from Mark Frueh. No, I prefer to think of it as scolding. If we couldn't do better I wouldn't be making such a fuss. But I believe we can. I also believe a lot of you believe we can. And it is you people, I hope, who are going to help me prove that we are right.

Following WORLD DIPCON I, I went back to London for a last minute look and then it was on to Italy for a couple of weeks. I had a chance to visit Venice, Naples, and Rome, as well as much more of Italy. It was great, although it was even hotter and more humid than San Antonio. But as I stood in the Vatican Archives, looking at the Papal document that divided the New World between Spain and Portugal, I thought to myself, 'This is the native American Diplomat in his true habitat.''

My thanx to Greg Ellis, Pete Gaughan, and Steve Wilcox; and Richard Walkerdine and Nick Kiznett for some great memories. And don't worry, Sellers, you'll get yours next year. And you to, Morgan.

llan B. Calhamer

Some time in 1987, I received an invitation from Richard Walkerdine to appear s the guest of honor at the International Diplomacy Convention in Birmingham, England.

I managed a three-week vacation covering the period. My wife and I flew non-stop rom O'Hare to Heathrow on July 3. Since there is a time difference of six hours, he day leaving was effectively 18 hours long, and the day returning was 30 hours. Weither of us experienced any jet lag.

I discovered that if you fly from Chicago to London, you don't have to reset your atch. All you do is look at it upside down, and read time off the hour hand. If ou want the time more accurately, you can then turn the watch right side up, and read inutes past the hour conventionally from the minute hand.

After the condensed night over the Atlantic, I spent the morning looking at the loud formations, which reminded me of a lot of deserts and mesas, and photographing hem. The pictures came out well, but did not capture the imposing nature of these ormations.

We landed after an eight hour flight and took a rental car at the airport. The ar was small and low, with a tight turning radius, and five speeds forward. To simplify atters I cruised in third for a while and then in fourth.

The traffic drives on the left. You have to stay alert to the difference; at necessarious you have to watch for cross traffic from the right direction in each me. The steering wheel is on the right, and you have to shift gears with the left nd. All of this sounds like a simple reversal of left and right, but you still clutch the your left foot and brake and accelerate with your right. Thus when you shift are you use both left appendages at once, which feels something like a flag flapping the breeze. The English have similar problems when they drive on the Continent, ich drives on the right.

Most of the intersections outside the cities, and many inside, are roundabouts, chamericans would call traffic circles; some so small that they are just circling ows painted on the pavement at an intersection; some circling several acres. At American traffic circle you nearly always have to stop; then you merge any way you. At a roundabout you can go right on if no one is coming. This saves lots of e, since you may go through them one after another all day long. If anyone is approach g you, coming around the roundabout, however, you must stop and wait for him to s. This gives the driver great safety and freedom to watch for his turnoff as he as around. Almost everyone follows the rules.

Direction signs, especially at the ever-present roundabouts, are excellent.

Except on the modern highways called Motorways, there are no shoulders along the s. Occasional well-marked laybys are provided, frequently big enough for only car, where you can pull off. In the West Country especially roads are closely d with hedgerows or stone walls. Drivers avoiding the stone walls sometimes lay the center line, and come around curves at you that way. There are also two-lanes that narrowed to one lane occasionally. You might have to back up to let a truck in the other direction.

It rained almost all the time we were there, and was so cool I had to buy a wool Since Chicago was in the middle of its record hottest summer, with 7 days over legrees F., this trip was a welcome way to break up the summer. When we got five es of sunshine. I hastily took pictures; but most of the time the overcast was —a porcelain sky, Conrad might have called it—and pictures taken under that ame out well. No wonder the English countryside is so green: it gets all that and grass looks preener on a cloudy day.

The countryside, I might add, was absolutely as remarkable as they say it is. It is ly heavily rolling, and the sheep keep it trimmed.

condition and contained many buildings dating from the 13th century. Other castles seemed to have been knocked down by the central government (whether monarchy or Protectoobvious reasons. We saw a lot of ruins (Barnard, Urquhart). At Dunster Castle, just the wall was knocked down; it was restored by a 19th century merchant Castle Drogo was built from scratch in the early 20th century by a merchant Brougham Castle was inherited in the 18th century by somebody who didn't want it, who tore it half down to sell the building materials.

Of sites we visited, castles, if Royal (Edinburgh, Tower of London) were in fine

Monasteries were closed in 1539. These seem to have been stupendously large building Jedburgh Abbey still stands minus its roof. We visited another abbey, of which just a part had been re-roofed, forming a huge church for a tiny community.

Of industrial history, there is the greatest treasure trove, and I find it most interesting, but I decided I would have to leave it largely for a later trip. every thing you see, you skip a hundred other things. We did see a 150 year old bobbin mill (it made wooden spools), and the steam engine that originally raised and lowered the Tower Bridge.

formal gardens, libraries full of books in ancient bindings. We also visited Wordworth's home; which includes the informal garden; said to be still substantially as Wordsworth laid it out. He was highly enough thought of as a landscape gardener to receive commission A remarkable high point that we stumbled across was the home of Issac Newton, a very old, small, primitive manor house, where Newton wrote some of his major works,

We saw a few manor houses, Van Dycks and Sir Joshuas on the wall, inlaid tables, and transacted the business of the manor, when he was not in Cambridge. Of Roman remains, we saw Hadrian's Wall at different points. Originally twenty feet high, it is now no more than six, and about equally wide. Such a wall had to be manned, so there are also remains of forts and blockhouses. We saw the famous Roman Baths at Bath, which are well interpreted for the public; and stumbled across the remains of the Temple of Mithras (the foundation stones) in the City of London.

Of churches, some had been desanctified and were in use as community centers and the like. One small one in a central city had old, uneven stone floors, memorial plaques to servicemen killed all over the globe in a long series of conflicts; one plaque going back to the 16th century; a plaque commemorating a churchman who had encouraged emigration We encountered two statues of knights recumbant that might have to Massachusetts Bay. dated from the 15th century; 18th-century grafitti had been carved on the stomach of

We viewed a number of Cathedrals; the one at Bath had two stone ladders going up its entire facade, with souls attempting to climb them; one soul was falling off.

I was impressed by the regional architecture of Britain on this first trip. Whole cities seem to be built in the same style. New buildings are built to harmonize with Nearly every building seems to be of stone. This is a material we do not see nearly so much of in the suburbs of Chicago, where the favored building material was brick from about 1945 to 1980, and wood both before and after that. Wood does not seem to be used in Britain for anything larger than a toolshed.

Texture was a big thing in art a few years ago, and stone walls have an interesting, attractive texture. When a whole city is built in one texture, and the next one in another, and so on, this can be pretty impressive. Thus Dorchester was built in a rounded, white or light yellow stone, interspersed with brick. The small town of Abbotsbury seemed to be built in the stone of Dorchester, without the brick (I understand this village has been extensively restored). At Barnstaple and nearabouts, walls were plastered smooth and painted in very light pastels. Bath seemed to be built of very large yellow stones, sawn smooth. Many villages were built of smooth red stones. In the North, there seemed to be more of a mix, but some older buildings were built of jagged black stones, which, inspite of deep indentations between stones, were laid up into very straight walls.

Heathrow is west of London and we headed west from there. We passed the Salisbury Main roads frequently go right through the center of town, Spire in a driving rain. streets narrow, parking impossible. Every city seems to have a well-marked parking lot close to the center, reasonable fees, and space nearly always available; so you might as well give up and go straight to the lot. We then arrived at Stonehedge. Here the builders chose a large, yellow-gray stone.

The structure was more compact and lighter in color than I had imagined. On the green plain it reminded me of a cue ball on a billiard table.

We proceeded to Dorchester, said to be Thomas Hardy's "Casterbridge." Almost every house in England seems to be a row house, typically built wall to wall, frequently without front lawns or parkways. The result is that the earth seems to be armored Pan the scene for a black and white movie and it may look a like a turtle's shell. little drab, but the reality is more cheerful. Frequently rooves are tiled in bright orange, and bright orange brick is common, rather than the dull red which is preferred Rooves always seem to be tile or slate, except for some thatch in the United States. in the South; never asphalt shingle as in the United States. A lot of stone homes have a vaguely Hansel and Gretel appearance.

It is also easy to see why the English coined the term, "A man's home is his castle." If they build a gatehouse, say, in the local materials, and then add a crenellated roof line, it looks a lot like a castle. Discovering how much hotels cost, we stopped at private homes that advertised These people generally charged eight or nine pounds ($14.00-$16.00) Bed and Breakfast.

per person per night for a good room, sharing the bath with maybe one or two other families, and breakfast. The dining room would usually have two or three small tables in it, and breakfast normally included all of juice, cereal, eggs, back bacon (Canadian bacon), sausages, toast, and sometimes mushrooms or small tomatoes fried in with the bacon and eggs. To covert pounds to dollars you double and subtract ten percent of the result. Dollars to pounds, you halve and add ten percent. Actually changing the money was ittle trouble. You are asked for your passport, and you want to act when you see

1 bank open, since they keep short and unexpected hours. We passed through Dartmoor, said to be Hardy's Egdon Heath, to the passing eye just a little hillier than what we had seen.

Coming back along the Bristol Channel, we rode on an inclined railway that operated y filling a tank below the passenger compartment with water. The weight of the water ulled the car down, pulling the other car up. At the bottom, they ran the water out, nile the other car was filling at the top.

We saw a fighter plane, down low and moving extremely fast, like a dart from a low gun; drove up Porlock Hill, overlooking the Bristol Channel; swung past Glastonbury or, once surrounded by marshes and said to be the Island of Avalon; gawked at the ithedrals of Wells and Bath; then moved up the Motorway to the Lake Country.

Thus inspired, we travelled along Hadrian's Wall, turned north through some treeless, llow-green country that looked about like Wyoming, then entered Scotland. We walked st a 'Chicago Pizza Factory' on the way to Edinburgh Castle. There are at least o excellent roads in Scotland, meeting at Inverness. We went up one and down the her, coming back along a chain of lochs, everything in shades of gray at Loch Lomond; en through a valley, high hills and low clouds. We then switched back to the east te and went down to Cambridge, where we gawked at the University buildings.

Time for the convention at hand, we puzzled our way through Hitchin and met Richard We had a delightful evening of conversation with Richard kerdine at his place. l his lovely and sparkling wife. Richard is twelve feet tall and about six inches I presented him with the inevitable Chicago Bears sweatshirt le at the shoulder. He seems to be a prehistorian, chicket player, economist, and young man on way up of the kind Maggie Thatcher likes.

Next day, Richard led me up through the roundabouts to Birmingham. The tournament was in High Hall, perhaps 17 stories. We were housed in a room that seemed comfortable for two students, overlooking a park-like area which included a pond and statuary Downstairs was a large cafeteria, where 200 people could play Diplomacy and eat their meals without crowding.

The tournament was run with a firm fist around a mug by Nick Kinzett. The tournament plan seemed excellent. decided by summing up the individual's score from both days.

There appeared to be several advantages to this scheme. If pals get together to form a team, they end up at different boards, reducing the pre-game conniving. A pre-game alliance between two teams would involve fourteen people. It would probably be harder to work it up and harder to keep it secret. A player who falls behind is not so likely to throw the game to someone else, either, since he would be letting his team down. He would also be hurting his score for the individual title, to be Thus it seems there is encouragement to compete vigorously and decided the next day. fairly.

At least one team arrived in identical tee shirts; some sported names like S.L.O.B.S. and Mouse Police: some were assembled at the tournament. The winners were War & Peace. consisting of John Gatheral, Richard Williams, Simon Brooks, Pete Mason, Andrew Glynn. Phil Creed, and Paul Finch; their worst score was six centers, and the next worst ten!

The following day Phil Day, who had a 20 unit Russia during the team competition. added a five unit Turkey to win the individual title, second and third going to Matt McVeigh and Jim Mills.

I gave a speech about the invention of Diplomacy, events and experiences along the way, strategy in the game and in general, MacKinder's geopolitics, and so on. Their eyes glazed over after about an hour ad a half, but I made the most of the rare opportunity to talk with people who knew just what I was talking about.

I put the original Diplomacy set on display; it has armies 2½ inches high and fleets 3 inches long, in historical flag colors, and a large map to match. Rusty Bolt Awards were handed out to hobby types. Martin Taylor, who competed in the croquet tournament, gave a magic show.

The Original DIPLOMACY Game

The convention was excellently run and deserved the splendid 200 player turnout. Larry Peery was there, wearing a Diplomacy World Staff tractor cap. Fred Davis was there.

Monday afternoon, we drove down to Heathrow, left the car, and took a cab into London, where a television producer had provided a hotel room for two nights. He has an excellent plan for a television program based on Diplomacy, for one of the smaller and more erudite channels. I spent some time discussing the project with these people; we also attended a foreign policy seminar, the speakers having just returned from the Communist Party Congress in the Soviet Union. Apparently the theme of the Congress turned out to be, "Restructuring Is Fine But The Party Must Lead It." The speakers took this theme seriously as a conservative shift; but I thought Gorbachev had gotten most of the specifics he wanted, and the conservatives had gotten in return little more than a generality, of a sort which you would have to expect at a Party Congress.

We had a little time to see the sights of London, and, this being the first trip, we spent the time on some of the best-known sights. We were just off Oxford Street, the prime shopping area. From there, double-decker buses took us through Trafalgar Square and Picadilly Circus to the House of Commons, St. Paul's, the Tower, etc. Since we have children of college age, we also had to make a trek to the Hard Rock Cafe, to buy tee shirts. From where the bus left us, we had to run across eight lanes of one-way traffic and climb a fence. (I realize the fence was there to discourage people from running across.)

An amusing incident occurred during the few minutes we were watching the House of Commons. It seems there were hardly any members present, on either side of the hisle. One young Conservative was lying in his seat, with his feet up on the seat n front of him. A minister completed the presentation of the Education Reform Bill, and a Laborite rose to reply. This man began his remarks by saying that you could see how little the government cared about education, from the fact that they allowed anly thirty minutes to debate the bill. Thereupon the Conservative, without changing is position, waved at the empty Labor benches and yelled, "Where are they?"

The flight back went way north, over islands that appeared to be uninhabited (no sible roads). I photographed quite a lot of ice, which had collected into long drifts i the ocean.

It was a memorable trip in which everything went well; the convention was great, e Diplomacy people were great, and Britain is great.

LOOKING FOR A DIPLOMACY MAGAZINE TO READ OR PLAY IN?

There are hundreds of Diplomacy related publications in the world-wide hobby. Some of them are very good. Some of them are just junk. Some are worth the money. Some aren't worth the paper they are printed on. To find out which are which check out the following guides which specialize in listing and reviewing Diplomacy publications:

ZINE REGISTER: Ken Peel, 8708 First Ave., #T-2, Silver Spring, MD 20910. Ask a copy of THE ZINE REGISTER and enclose $2.25 for 3 issues. A copy is free to DW Sampler buyers. For a sampling of hobby publications send a large (LARGE!) and $2.40.

To find out what the hobby things about its gamemasters and publications send for a copy of the 1988 Runestone Poll results. Contact Bruce Linsey, Box 1334, Albany, NY 12201, and ask for a copy of THE CREAM SHALL RISE ($6.00).

If you'd like to check out some of the many excellent foreign Diplomacy publications send a SASE to Simon Billenness, 630 Victory Blvd., #6F, Staten Island, NY 10301, and ask about the International Subscription Exchange.

If reading all of the above leaves your thoroughly confused then you need a copy of the hobby's two basic introductory handbooks: SUPERNOVA is available from Bruce Linsey, address above, for $1.00. MASIERS OF DECEIT is available from Steve Arnawoodian, 602 Hemlock Ave., Lansdale, PA 19446, for $1.00.

And if you are crazy enough to think you might like to try publishing a Diplomacy magazine or gamemastering a postal Diplomacy game you should read ONCE UPON A DEADLINE, available from Bruce Linsey, address above, for $3.00. That with discourage you if nothing else will.

WORLD DIPCON I: THE INDIVIDUAL TOURNAMENT

1ATT MCVEIGH

(My memory fades fast when I attempt to recall what happened in this game. Either drank too much afterwards or I am getting old!)

I picked Turkey at the start. Larry Peery was Austria and a good friend of mine, Kevin Hawthorn, was playing Italy.

The game plan I had in mind was to form an alliance with Kevin and one also with the Russian player. I did not know any of the other players, so I wanted to take advantage of Kevin's proximity and eliminate Austria quickly.

The first move indicated that things might go rather differently, however. I eft the Black Sea open and Russia sailed in. On top of that Kevin decided to ignore my advances, and chose to have a non-aggression pact with Larry. Fortunately I talked he Russian into moving his fleet to Rumania; which left me with one build.

1902 saw a change in my fortunes. Kevin and Larry, if not allied, were certainly oing in opposite directions. Fortunately France was attacking Italy, and EnglanN as heading for the Barents Sea. Russia and myself set upon securing the Balkans and nocking Austria down. By the end of 1904 Larry was down to two home centers. I had ix and Russia four or five, because he was under heavy attack from England in the orth, and therefore forced into an alliance with me.

It was obvious by now that an unholy alliance had formed between England, Germany, nd France. Information filtered through that these three young players were all close iends. It was becoming apparent that any amount of screaming and yelling (another rm for negotiating!) would not break this partnership easily.

Unfortunately the other four players were forced to ally together in order to op these three forcing a draw. My personal opinion is that you play Diplomacy to n. If that becomes impossible at any stage; then one should attempt to force a draw, respective of "friendship."

As 1905 drew to a close the situation for the Quadruple Alliance was a very rosy. Diplomacy had failed to force any one of the other three to attack another, but sy were all convinced by our arguments enough to leave several units behind the less to prevent an attack in the rear. Our alliance had a different attitude. Italy, tria, and Russia had all their units on the front line; with mine caught up behind, ble to move without offending anyone. I had to get builds somewhere, and a "backstab" too tempting to resist. I firstly attacked Austria, eliminating him completely avoid him changing sides. By then I could resist it no longer. Italy was holding the west, and Russia just had to go! By the end of 1908 I had fourteen pieces, ain of seven in three years.

As far as I am concerned the only way it is safe to "backstab" an ally is when s possible to replace his own front line units with your own as quickly as possible. is more important than just grabbing centers for early gain, because otherwise are will either gain directly also, or will be able to recruit your ex-ally as an themselves.

Now it was victory or nothing! The triple alliance was stronger than ever now, Italy and Russia were still there. With the game automatically ending at the end 911 and the likelihood of Kevin soon joining the other side, I was forced (is anyone 3 to believe this!?), to turn on Kevin's centers. I made it to sixteen but that t. By the end of 1910 I was still on sixteen and we all agreed to end the game.

Several other games had produced countries on sixteen centers but the points system into account other factors as well. The next highest country to me was Germany ght centers and there were six (!!) survivors in our game. I ended up scraping second place by about one percentage point.

I far prefer face-to-face Diplomacy. You cannot NMR for a start, and that is rather a forte of mine. I have just handed a game I should have won to another player by NMRing at the vital moment. Irritating in the extreme.

I firmly believe that the main factor in my success in this game had nothing to do with my own ability. The unbreakable triple alliance was farcical. None of the three players had more than six centers (or less either!) until the last couple of turns. Their intransigent stance forced the rest of us into an alliance we would otherwis have avoided.

The game was not a classic by any means. It was, however, a classic demonstration of the level of irrelevance a triple alliance can bring to the game unless the other players are careful. My own personal tactic in a game, if I can manage it, is to form an alliance with one player and direct all my energies into quickly eliminating another. If your ally does the same, half the board is already yours. How simple it all sounds!

/And there you have it, the 'wit and wisdom' of the man who came in second at this year's WORLD DIPCON. I suggest you read his article again, carefully. Who knows, it just might come in useful at the next DIPCON./

IT'S TRUE! IF YOU LIVE LONG ENOUGH...

Back in the late 1960s and early 1970s one of the American hobby's most active publishers was the late Don Miller. One of Don's magazines was called DIPSOMANIA. It was filled with all kinds of games and interesting which is why, after all these years, DIPSOMANIA is still a material; good read.

Well, DIPSOMANIA lives! I have just received the first issue of a new DIPSOMANIA published by G A. Bryant, Rue Jean Pauly, 121, B-4300, ANS, Belgium. He's looking for players on both sides of the Atlantic. So if you are a new player and want to try a new zine drop him a line and tell him DIPLOMACY WORLD sent you. Try a European zine for a change.

Thomas M. Kane

Revision is the sincerest form of flattery in the world of games, so here are two new scenarios for DIPLOMACY. Both help recreate the confusion which led to World War One. In the early twentieth century, terrorism and sudden uprisings ruined all attempts to settle matters in the Balkans, just as they do today across the Black Sea, in the Middle East. Another complication which DIPLOMACY does not include was that no nation at that time could be confident it knew what the others wanted. They had to worry that their neighbors were NOT trying to conquer the world. Both of these concepts can give DIPLOMACY players new things to bargain about.

Balkan Nationalism

To simulate the unpredictability of far-eastern Europe, you might add an extra player who represents Balkan Nationalist factions. This player has home supply centers in Serbia, Bulgaria, Rumania, and Greece. When the game begins, no Balkan units are on the board, but the Nationalist may begin building them in the first move. The Balkan Nationalist has both special advantages and special handicaps.

When the Balkan player builds a unit, the new piece is treated as if it had been there on the previous turn. Thus, if a foreign unit was attempting to move in and take the "empty" supply center, it could not advance without support. Better yet, the Balkan player may build in a home supply center whenever it has been left empty in the previous turn, even if some enemy previously occupied the province. Except when an enemy army is actually in these supply centers, the Nationalist controls them. Any nation which wishes to master the Balkans will have to keep its armies there, to suppress such uprisings.

Unfortunately for the Nationalist, the different Balkan provinces are independent ountries. They should each have distinct pieces representing their armies. Units hich were built in different areas of the Balkans never support each other, and Balkan avies will not convoy foreign Balkan armies. The only way the Balkan player can unite hese units is to conquer several of his (or her) own nations with the armies of one. alkan nations can be treated independently with respect to supply centers and builds, o, for example, if Serbia occupies Rumania, it is entitled to build a second Serb nit, which can support the first one.

If eight players are not available, you might make the Balkans player a "Balkans/Otto-n" player and give that player Turkey too. Under these rules, Turkey begins play the its units in Constantinople and Ankara, but not Smyrna. All Turkish supply centers ill produce Turkish armies, but the Balkans remain disunited. This means that Turkey libegin play weak, but has a chance to overrun the whole peninsula, just as Austria d Russia feared Turkey would.

riant Victory Conditions

The "winners" of World War I barely conquered any territory, and the empires of it time competed over many issues, not just land. Actually, no nation felt completely re it knew what the others wanted. The Kaiser of Germany wrote several "Letters the British People" to insist that the expanding German navy was intended to support olonial empire, not threaten England. Of course, nobody believed him. In DIPLOMACY, s confusion can be simulated by secretly assigning each country a set of victory ditions, which may or may not be the same. A gamemaster may carefully choose what h nation's goal is, or the conditions can be numbered, placed in a hat, and drawn, yers may tell each other what their nation needs to win, and they may also lie.

Possible Victory Conditions

1. To capture any ten supply centers, among which must be at least one Home Supply Center of a particular enemy. This foe must be chosen, written down and informed of the fact before play begins. However, the other players need not know of the enmity.

2. To capture any eighteen supply centers, as usual.

3. To prevent any other player from winning the game for twelve turns.

4. To obtain at least two times more units (armies and fleets) than any other country.

5. Other variants, especially those which introduce economics to DIPLOMACY, make many more victory conditions possible. For example, with my "Interests of Trade" variant, published in DIPLOMACY WORLD 47, nations could need to obtain twenty manufactured goods tokens, twenty raw materials tokens, or 1,000 "credits."

Historians still argue about the goals of World War One, but the following motivation would probably be fairly realistic. Germany and France each wanted to expand and conquer each other. England hoped to maintain the status quo and rebuild its once-invincible navy. Russia, Turkey, and Austria-Hungary all hoped to expand and capture more territory. The Balkan player, if this variant is also used, would have wanted to capture territory and punish Austria-Hungary.

Whichever country obtains its goal first wins and if two nations succeed simultaneousl the game continues until only one victor remains. The final winner need not be one of the original two. This period of trying to overcome the winners could be one way of interpreting the "twenty-years-crisis" between World Wars One and Two, where France and England had defeated Germany, but the Germans hoped to refight the battle.

Both of these rules give players more things to negotiate about. A Serbian Nationalist will make the Balkans far harder to colonize, and forces all the Powers around that area to accomodate him. The Nationalist himself might cautiously try to negotiate foreign units away and unite all the provinces with one army. Alternatively, the Nationalic could raise an army in each area, and try to win several foreign wars at once. The victory condition variants divides players into satisfied blocs and ambitious factions, making some alliances solid, most conditional and a few impossible. As a consequence of alliances being stronger, players will trust their allies more, giving traitors far more opportunities. Players must try to deduce their opponents' motives, deciding which ones coincide with their own. Some players must keep current borders stable. Others will eagerly conquer each other.

DIPLOMATIC ENCOUNTERS

Designed by Rick Dorsey & Steve Spriggs

Diplomatic Encounters (DE) is a game which combines the features of Diplomacy and Cosmic Encounters. This is achieved by allowing the players in a game of Diplomacy to use Special Powers from the game Cosmic Encounters. These Special Powers allow each player their own unique means of "bending" the rules to their advantage. This game was play tested by the Vitro Gaming Club of Wheaton, MD and has been played several times at Origins in Baltimore. It is a balanced game and gives enjoyable results.

DE uses the standard map and rules that are usually associated with Diplomacy. Each player is required to follow all of these rules, except for the ones which their Special Power(s) specifically say they can bend. In the initial game setup, it must be decided how the powers will be distributed, the number that each player will get, and how long they may keep them. During play testing, it was decided that two Powers per player was the ideal number to handle. In order to introduce all of the Powers into the game, the favorite mode of play is for the players to submit a preference list for the first of two powers, then have the GM randomly assign the second power. Each Winter season, the player has his choice of which power to keep, and a new power is then assigned (randomly or by preference list).

The obvious question is: "Which powers are the best?" The most universally liked powers are the first four on the list below: Dirty Harry, Citadel, Speedy, and Sneak. Some powers are obviously better suited to maritime positions (Amphibian is very popular with England and Turkey). Most powers are useful only in certain situations. If that situation occurs, the power is very helpful, otherwise it may be entirely useless. The Invisible Man is a case in point; having an invisible fleet somewhere in the North Atlantic can be devastating to a paranoid English or French player, but having an invisible army in the Balkans is useless as each player can see its obvious location.

Since some powers function during what are normal retreat seasons, these must be played separately. Likewise, Winter seasons must always be played separately because that is when the powers change hands.

General Limitations on Powers

GL1. Any power which says "See GL1" may not be combined with another "GL1" power within a single unit during the same season. For example, German A Munich which is a "Dirty Harry" unit may not be a "Citadel" unit, but F Kiel may be a "Citadel" unit.

GL2. Any power which says "See GL2" may not be used against the same opposing player for two consecutive seasons (Spring-Fall or Fall-Spring).

Powers

- 1. Dirty Harry
 - One unit is designated as the "Dirty Harry" unit. This unit now has a value of 1.5 in an attack, or in support of an attack. If attacked by a single enemy unit while giving support, only 1 of the 1.5 support is cut. An attack by two units, separate or combined, will cut all of the 1.5 support. Once designated, the "Dirty Harry" unit remains the same unit until it is annihilated or disbanded. Only then may another unit be
- Citadel

One unit is designated as the "Citadel" unit. This unit now has a value of 2 when defending or supporting a holding unit. If attacked by a single enemy unit while giving support, only 1 of the 2 supports is cut. An attack by two units, separate or combined, will cut both of the supports. Once designated, the "Citadel" unit remains the same unit until it is annihilated or disbanded. Only then may another unit

3. Speedy Gonzalez

designated the "Dirty Harry" unit. See GL1 be designated the "Dirty Harry" unit. See GL1

- One unit per turn may move prior to all others, then make a normal move (i.e. two moves per turn). Speedy orders are submitted with normal orders. The same unit may not "Speed" two consecutive seasons. See GL1
- 4. Sneak

One unit per turn moves normally, then moves again with the retreat orders (i.e. two moves per turn). Sneak orders are submitted with the normal retreat orders. The same unit may not "Sneak" while retreating, nor during two consecutive seasons.

A stand-off occurs when the "Sneak" move conflicts with a retreat. The retreating unit disbands, while the "Sneak" unit merely fails to move. See GL1

5. Spy

All moves for this player may be made contingent upon any one simultaneous enemy order. Player cannot spy on the same enemy unit during two consecutive seasons. Orders must include all possible unit contingencies.

6. Paratrooper

One unit per turn may paratroop. This unit must originate in a Supply Center which it owns, may then fly over any one territory (land or water) to land two territories away. If an enemy unit attempts to occupy the starting Supply Center, the Paratrooper must succeed or be annihilated. Standard numerical advantage applies to success or failure. Paratroopers may be supported as in any normal attack. The unit may be an army or a fleet. See GL1

7. Torch

During the retreat orders, this player may destroy a Supply Center from which the player's unit was forced to retreat from. The torched Supply Center is removed from play until three "rebuild SC" orders are submitted by the torched SC's current occupier. "Rebuild SC" is in addition to normal unit orders and do not have to be consecutive. A partially rebuilt SC may be "retorched". The total number of SC's in the game may never be less than 32.

8. Builder

The Builder can create a new SC after a lengthy stay in a non-SC territory. An occupying unit must Hold and "Build SC" for three turns (need not be consecutive) to create the SC. The total number of SC's in the game may never be greater than 36.

Rescinder

One Rescinder unit attack order per turn may be changed to "HOLD" with retreat orders. All prior-turn adjudications affected by this "rescind" are re-adjudicated accordingly.

10. Propagandist

The Propagandist may prohibit one specific normal enemy unit order. This player may not prohibit use of an enemy power, or a movement order applied to a special power. The Propaganda order is written "Prohibit A Rom (S) A Apu-Ven". The result of a prohibit order changes the enemy unit order to "HOLD". In this example, A Rom would have been changed to A Rom H, but A Apu would still attack Ven. If the prohibit order specifies a non-existent (NSO) enemy order, then GL2 does not 12.

11. Amphibian

The Amphibian has the power to change from armies to fleets and fleets to armies. A fleet converts to an army anywhere at the owners discretion. Converting an army to a fleet requires that the army begin the move in a SC (to build the ships, of course). The order to convert is in addition to normal orders for the units converting. The

Invisible Man

apply. See GL2

One unit per turn is designated the Invisible Man at the owners discretion. This unit is visible only to the owner and the GM. Orders should be written "F Mid(Man)-Bre, F Eng (S) Man-Bre". This set of orders would be published as "Man-_, F Eng (S) Man". An exception to secrecy is the Invisible Man captures a neutral or enemy SC as a result of a Fall turn. In the above example, orders would be published as "Man-Bre, Eng (S) Man-Bre" for a successful Fall capture. See GL1 enemy is unaware of the conversion until after the converted unit has moved. See

13. Island Hopper Armies are permitted to occupy bodies of water without having any effect on the enemy or friendly fleets occupying or attacking that body of water. A Hopper unit can not land against opposition, even with numerical superiority, nor can the Hopper unit stand off while attempting to land. If the Island-Hopper power is lost while armies are Hopping, the player has one turn to land or the Hopper unit drowns. See

14. Merchantman

GL1

A Merchantman fleet at-sea during Winter accounting may qualify to be a "Merchant". The Merchant is self-supporting and does not count towards unit totals vs. SC accounting. The number of "Merchants" which the Merchantman can support is dependent on the number of SC's controlled. Following is the table showing the number of SC's/Merchants supported: 1 SC/0 M, 2/1, 3/1, 4/1, 5/2, 6/2, 7/2, 8/3, 8+/3.

15. Annihilator

The Annihilator may submit an order to annihilate one enemy unit per turn. In order to be successful, the specific enemy unit designated to be annihilated must be dislodged by the Annihilator on the turn the "ANN" order was submitted. See GL2

16. Amoeba

One unit per year may be the "Amoeba". This unit is designated in the Spring, then moves in the Fall. When designated, the Amoeba splits into two units, both holding, with a combined defense value of two. Both units may occupy the same territory only at the end of the Spring move, they must separate or fuse back into one unit at the end of the Fall turn. For Fall orders the Amoeba is treated as two units temporarily occupying the same territory. i.e. Turk A Bul-Amoeba, Fall: Turk A Bul-Rum, A Bul (S) A Bul-Rum. Whether Bul-Rum succeeds or fails, the Turks end up with a single unit in Bul again. See GL1

17. Taunt

One unit per turn can "Taunt" one adjacent enemy unit in addition to its normal order. The adjacent enemy unit is then forced to attack the territory where the Taunt unit began the turn. Any enemy unit using a special power is not affected by taunting. See GL1 & GL2

18. Gypsy

All Gypsy units can carry a SC into a non-SC territory. Only one SC is ever permitted per territory. Gypsy orders are part of a unit attack order. i.e. Turk A Smy(Gypsy)-Syr. At the end of this turn, Smy no longer has an SC, but Syr does. The SC remains in Syr until Gypsy chooses to move it again.

19. Marine

The Marine does not need to land a convoyed army. The army can remain in the same body of water as the convoying fleet until the Marine chooses to land the army. After at least one full turn in the water, the "convoying" fleet may support the army land attack. The Marine can convoy foreign armies in the same manner, but the army can mutiny, destroying both units.

20. Kamikaze

One unit per turn my be the Kamikaze. Kamikazes annihilate any units which attempt to enter or which occupy but fail to leave the "Kamikazed" territory. The Kamikaze unit does not survive a successful attack. i.e. English F Edi Kamikazes North Sea. Any unit including friendlies, attacking into or defending out of North Sea is annihilated as a result of this move. See GL2

21. Zombie

Units belonging to the Zombie die only in battle, never during Winter accounting. The zombie player builds new units based on conventional rules, i.e. total units equals total SCs.

One unit per turn may be the Besieger. An attack by the Besieger forces the enemy unit being attacked to cower in fear (its order is changed to "HOLD"). See GL2

The Trader trades control of one friendly for one enemy unit each turn. The order

 Zap
 The Zap cancels use of one power for the following two turns. A Zap submitted with Spring moves cancels a power for the following Fall and Spring turns, or Winter turn depending on when the Zapped power was effective. No power can be zapped again

Nomad
The Nomad may build in any SC he owns, when the SC in unoccupied and conventional Winter build rules permit a Winter build.

26. Diplomat

The Diplomat has the power to impose peace between occupied territories by making the border impenetrable. The Diplomat chooses borders to become De-Militarized Zones (DMZ). DMZ's must border territories occupied by two opposing players. The Diplomat may declare as many as three contiguous borders to be DMZ's when

The Diplomat may declare as many as three contiguous borders to be DMZ's when the DMZ's are adjacent to opposing units of two non-Diplomat players. The Diplomat may only declare one border a DMZ when he is one of the two opposing DMZ units. i.e. Spring: France DMZ Bur-Ruh, A Bur-Bel; German A Ruh-Bur/imp.

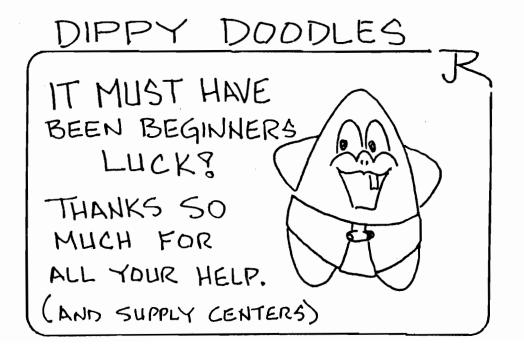

Fall: France DMZ Ven-Tri, DMZ Tyr-Tri, DMZ Tyr-Vna; Austria A Tri (S) A Vna-Tyr/imp. A Vna-Tyr/imp; Italian A Tyr (S) A Ven-Tri/imp, A Ven-Tri/imp. In Spring, France DMZed one border between himself and German. During the Fall, France DMZed three borders between Italy and Austria. In each case the DMZ took effect the same turn and foiled attack plans. DMZs disappear immediately after the following retreating season. See GL2

27. Clone

The Clone begins the game with the Dirty Harry power. This is the first "cloned" power which the Clone has. Each turn in which the Clone forces a retreat or captures an enemy SC, the Clone gives up his current "cloned" power and assumes one of the two powers possessed by the retreating or captured enemy player. The Clone chooses which power to assume, but the new power must replace and change the current "cloned" power. Cloning does not void the opponent's power, just duplicates it. If multiple retreats/captures occur, the Clone chooses one from among all of the retreating/captured powers. The choice of "cloned" powers is submitted during Spring retreats (Summer) and Winter turns and becomes effective immediately.

28. Pygmy

Each Pygmy SC supports two half-power Pygmy units. Two Pygmy units may occupy each territory. One unit is sufficient to own a territory. Two Pygmy units occupying the same territory can, at the Pygmy's option, be designated as a "Pygmy *2" unit. This "Pygmy *2" can attack, support, or defend as a single normal unit. One Pygmy fleet may convoy two Pygmy armies simultaneously. When Pygmy loses the Pygmy power, each occupied Pygmy territory contains one normal power unit, which must be supported as such during Winter accounting.

A CREATIVE GAMEMASTERING TOOL: THE FREE PASS

Mark Berch

Surely one of the most agonizing dilemmas a gamemaster can face is an No Moves Received which turns out to be the gamemaster's fault. These have occurred even with good gamemasters under a variety of circumstances. In one such incident, a gamemaster crafted a solution that other gamemasters may want to use as well.

In the spring of 1981, Blair Cusack moved, and sent a change of address form to Randolph Smyth, publisher of FOL SI FIE. This was received by Randolph, but FOL SI FIE #139 was mistakenly sent to the old address. Blair never got it, and in #140, he was No Moves Received in his two games, 1987M and 1979Y. Ordinarily, it would have been Blair's responsibility to inform the gamemaster that #139 had not been received on schedule. The problem was, the Canadian postal strike of 1980 had delayed #139, so it had no expected time of arrival. However, Blair was not totally blameless. The deadline for #140 was more than five weeks after the end of the strike. Blair should have realized that something was amiss, as FOL SI FIE is normally a rather punctual magazine. Randolph would not have been expected to wait so long before resuming publication. So while the main fault was the gamemaster's, there was contributory negligence by Blair. Randolph called it, 'My most difficult decision as a gamemaster that I can remember."

The usual solution is a replay of the season. However, this can cause more injustices than it would solve, and Randolph felt that this might be the case in the two games as well. Further, it is normally used when the player is blameless, or virtually blameless

So Randolph retained the No Moves Received, but gave Blair one "Free Pass" in each game. The next time his orders failed to appear, Randolph would, at his own expense, phone to get the orders, or delay the games for an additional interval to give him a chance to get them in. After such a "prevented No Moves Received" in the game, he would have used up his free pass in the game—it was not a perpetual guarantee against No Moves Received. It would vanish when the game ends or was transferred to another gamemaster, or if he resigned from the game. Blair thus had the protection, and his promises had a bit more credibility, since no one could figure that he might No Moves Received. There were no objections to this plan.

Such a plan could have applicability even in cases where the player was blameless. There are some gamemasters who feel that a replay will always introduce more unfairness than it eliminates, and so do not replay under any circumstances. The free pass could then ameliorate some of the harm. This palliative measure could be fine tuned to say that it would be used only if the player was partially at fault (as was the case in FOL SI FIE) but permanently in the game if the player was blameless. If the gamemaster does not want to get into an argument about the appropriateness of the remedy, he or she should put it into the Houserules. This way, no one can object if it is used. I would also suggest that the rule specify that the free pass cannot be transferred either to a replacement player or to another player in the game. It's a protection for the person, not a property right.

It's not an ideal solution; there isn't going to be one for such a dilemma. But it does give the victimized player at least something, and other players shouldn't feel that he's been over-compensated.

EDINBURGH VS. YORKSHIRE: THE FRENCH CONNECTION

Mark Berch

Unless the English player plans to open Fleet London-English Channel, he must consider the question of whether to move his army to Edinburgh or Yorkshire. Writers discussing this topic normally analyze the decision in terms of the trade off between: (1) Yorkshire's ability to defend London against French Fleet English Channel, thereby freeing Fleet North Sea for other duties; and (2) Edinburgh's ability to be convoyed to Norway, thereby, again, freeing Fleet North Sea for other duties. These are of course significant considerations, but in any given game, they might not be a factor in English planning at all. He may have no interest in convoying to Norway, or any fear of Fleet Brest-English Channel. There is a third factor, which is the subject of this essay.

Suppose that England wants to launch an attack on France in 1902, or just wants to be well positioned for it should be decide later to do that. Perhaps be cannot find an ally for a 1901 attack, and does not want to do it alone. Or perhaps be needs time to see what the Russian stance will be.

The traditional anti-French build in 1901 is Fleet Liverpool. This has the drawback that the unit does not threaten any French centers in 1902, but more importantly, it throws away any element of surprise. Persuading France that Fleet Liverpool is not anti-French is such a formidable task that I daresay most English players won't bother. The French player, upon seeing such a blatantly hostile build, is likely to make sure his relations with Germany and Italy are in the best of order. Letters may go to Rusia urging him north, etc. This is not what the English want. Better that France should be busy moving against Italy or Germany, perhaps urging Russia to support the latter venture.

A build of Fleet London permits Fleet London-English Channel with Fleet North Sea either supporting, or being involved in Belgium. In the long run, it is not as powerful a threat as Fleet Liverpool-Irish Sea, but if it catches France off guard with, for instance, Fleet Spain (south coast)-West Mediterranean, Fleet Marseilles-Gulf of Lyon instead of Fleet Spain (south coast)-Mid Atlantic, Fleet Marseilles-Spain (south coast), that can be worth a great deal. The problem is, France is likely to say, "If you're keen on a fleet, and you don't want me to build Fleet Brest, then I expect you to build Fleet Edinburgh, which goes to the North Sea just as well as Fleet London." And that is where Army Liverpool-Edinburgh comes in.

In the fall, England does Fleet Norwegian-Norway, and attempts to convoy the army to Belgium, Holland, or Denmark. If the convoy succeeds, the plan is washed out, but England can console himself with two builds. But if the convoy fails, Edinburgh is occupied, and thus England has the perfect excuse to build Fleet London. In a sense, Belgium is the best target, since that is least likely to irritate Germany. But even a standoff in Holland or Denmark may be acceptable to Germany if he's apprised of the plan and is getting Belgium. Such a standoff would be further evidence, to France, of England's pro-French leanings.

Thus, the choice of Yorkshire or Edinburgh has ramifications for Winter 1901 as well as Fall 1901, and the English player who wants to plan for France as first victim would be wise to take that into account.

YOU BE THE GAMEMASTER: PART TWO

Mark Berch

One of your players normally sends in a self-addressed postcard with his orders which you mail back to him so he can be sure his orders arrive. Suppose:

A. He includes a second postcard, addressed to another player in the game, an with the same message, which is: ""Your Spring 1905 orders have arrived." Will yo mail that one as well?

B. Suppose the postcards were included with a second set of orders, and each postcar says, "I have received your new orders for Spring 1905." But on inspection, you se that the orders are exactly the same. It occurs to you that the player may be intendin to trick his ally into thinking that he's altered his orders when he has done no suc thing. Will you mail the second postcard?

C. Same as A, but suppose the second postcard, you notice, has the return addres and the other player's address in reversed position (in other words, it's actuall addressed to you, the GM, with a return address of the other player in the game) This postcard will come back to you. It occurs to you that this may be deliberate—the player may want his ally to think that orders (or change of orders) weren's sent in, and he may want to later claim that he tried to do it right, but goofed (akin to a deliberate misorder). Will you mail it?

D. Same as A, but suppose the postcard included some information about a vote such as he had written on the postcard to go to the other player, "I have received your Spring 1908 orders and your 'Nay' vote." Would you mail it? Would you mail it?

if his actual vote had been "Yea?"

E. Similar to A, but this time, with partial information on game orders, such as "I have received your fleet removal, and your Spring 1909 orders." Would you mail it? Would you mail it if he had actually removed a fleet?

THE DIPLOMACY ALLIANCE AGAINST AIDS:

As part of last year's Runestone Poll campaign Simon Billenness and Barbara Passoff led a campaign to raise money for cancer research. Some $1,400 was raised through their good efforts. Because I believed that such research is the responsibility of the Government, not private charity, I chose instead to make a donation to my local AIDS Project; which provides help to AIDS victims. Well, Simon and Barbara took up my challenge and this year many of you donated some $900 to their fund raising drive for AIDS research. Once again I believe the money should have gone to AIDS victims relief, not research since that is or should be a governmental responsibility. If you question my reasoning I urge you to read Randy Shilts book AND THE BAND PLAYED ON; which is now available in paperback. All of those of you who donated are to be commended and perhaps your donation will make a difference to the first hobby member manner.

There have been many attempts to create software that would permit a gamemaster to process orders. I have witnessed six attempts myself, of which only one carries my highest recommendation. Please be advised, however, the software to which I refer is not a program that allows one or more players to play against the computer. Avalon Hill's DIPLOMACY disk does that, although not very well. This software is only for gamemasters. It will permit you to judge your own game(s) in an efficient, error-free

The program is written in a form of Pascal. I have the source code available, but I will not release it unless developers can show a way in which to improve the program. The program, however, I am willing to make available to anyone. It runs, perfectly fine, on IBM XT/AT or compatibles. Normally I would distribute the disk as shareware, for no charge, but in fairness to the Diplomacy organizations, I feel that a fee is necessary, mostly because the software is so great. It's really worth a million. Thus, anyone who sends me $20.00 U.S. or Canadian, will receive the program (360K disk) which includes documentation and a sample game. I will donate $15 of all amounts submitted to DIPLOMACY WORLD for Larry to use on hobby related services as he sees fit.

As with all programs, certain trade-offs had to be made. The author implemented the procedure whereby Spring orders/Spring retreats and Fall orders/Fall retreats must all be submitted at the same time. (Otherwise known as the European system). For those who insist upon accepting orders on the Spring Orders followed by Spring Retreats and Fall orders followed by Fall retreats format, this program is not for you.

To put into perspective just how effective this program is, THE DIPLOMACY HAVEN (613-738-1361) is now carrying six games on weekly deadlines. The system operator can process all six games in less than one hour, including printing of map reports. We have been using the program for one year, and have found no bugs.

In what appears to be an easy task at first, writing a Diplomacy adjudication program is actually quite complex. The resolutions of the convoys are particularly difficult. Finally, a program exists that permits gamemasters to effectively process orders.

THAT OTHER ELECTION

A lot of people still haven't made up their minds about who they are going to vote for. I have two questions for you to think about as you go into the polling booth. First: Don't think about the candidate's positions on a specific issue or what they might do in a particular case if such-and-such happened. We can never anticipate what crises will confront a president. Instead, ask yourself how this man will react under pressure period. Second: consider the advisors the candidates have chosen. That will tell you much about what kind of person he is. And then go in and mark your ballot...for Thatcher, Gorbachev, or John Paul.

THE HOBBY, OR GONE AND BACK AGAIN

game...at first..."

'Why are you getting back into Diplomacy again? You've been away for nine years now! A wife, children, home, career, commitments——you're not a teenager anymore."

I told myself all of these things before picking up the phone a few months ago. That call to Ayalon Hill sealed my fate — a return to the Diplomacy bobby.

That call to Avalon Hill sealed my fate - a return to the Diplomacy hobby.

Unfortunately, that voice at the other end of the line was extremely helpful.

"Yes, people still play Diplomacy. Of course there's still a postal hobby. Yes, I can help you get in touch with active players. Just a minute and I'll find some names and addresses for you..."

Before you know it, hosts of PBM Diplomacy fanatics are sending information.

A copy of BUSHWACKER in the mail box. Cal White's second zine, NORTHERN FLAME. Letterhea from the Institute for Diplomatic Studies. The missing issues of the zine I folded 9 years ago - sent by the person I was feuding with at the time!

Speaking of Cal White, it's strange that he should return to the hobby at the same time as me. Does he still remember that stab back in 1977? Why does he keep sending Ginsu knives with each letter? Why do phone calls keep coming with no one at the other end? He seems so friendly these days, but...

The tell tale signs start to show around the house. A game sits out on the dining room table for weeks on end. Wooden blocks are always scattered about on the carpet.

Stacks of correspondence appear in little used niches beside the bookcase. Pencils, pens, and stamps seem to show up in the strangest places. Letters are greeted by my wife with a roll of the eyes while she sadly shakes her head.

Brainwashing a two year old - "Come on now, say D-I-P-L-O-M-A-C-Y. Very good! Now the skinny ones are fleets and the fat ones are armies..."

"No dear, you cannot give your son Conference Map wallpaper for his birthday.

"And the pour below may not have a rattle made out of your reader.

He won't understand. And the new baby may not have a rattle made out of your wooden armies and fleets!"

Before you know it, you've signed up for a game, then two. Next thing you know you're on a standby list. "Well, maybe I'll restart the zine, but only one orphan start to wonder why the lights are on late into the night. Coworkers think that your talk about "this great game" comes from a deranged mind. "Boy, he DOES need a vacation!" Your wife wonders why anyone would want to go to Texas in mid-summer.

Returning to the hobby does have its drawbacks. "Why did I throw out those old issues of DIPLOMACY WORLD two years ago?" (Not to mention old BUSHWACKERS, EVERYTHINGS, etc. etc.) After all, something in those old issues could give you a little leverage in a new game - you never know.

And just who is Kathy Caruso? Is this really just an alias for Edi Birsan? One never knows for sure, especially when one has been absent for 9 years.

And so it goes. The big three-oh! crisis arrives. The hobby is the golden opportunity to relive those teenage years, or is it? With any luck, at least a little maturity has been gained in nine long years. Will it help your play? Can you stay out of feuds? Will you actually win a game one of these days?

Can you manage to stay out of hobby politics this time? Hopefully that pimple—faved temperary needs the age beest. After all if you can't develop any faced teenager no longer needs the ego boost. After all, if you can't develop any confidence being in the working world, you'll never develop it.

What did those years in hobby politics accomplish? Probably not much. The same things are still happening today that were happening in 1979. But there is always hope.

Hobbyists beware! Fact IS stranger than fiction. Don't think that dropping out of the hobby is the final word in the matter. It's an addiction. Withdrawal symptoms may take years to appear, but the hobby is a patient taskmaster. And people have low resistance to anything addictive.

There you have it. It's not a pretty picture. After years of living without, another poor soul is drawn relentlessly back into the Diplomacy hobby. It's only a short step from here to becoming a wino on a street corner. But there is a way to prevent this scene from happening to you. Don't ever leave the hobby in the first Note: The author was active in the PBM hobby from 1972-1979, including five years as a publisher and gamemaster. He flamed out in 1979 in a blaze of mediocrity, having served as a controversial president of the International Diplomacy Association. Until the Diplomacy bug bit for the second time, he lived a quiet, normal life in suburban Denver, Colorado. His current political stance is "It's for the birds." His playing philosophy is "Boys just want to have fun." With any luck, this renewed interest in Diplomacy is only a temporary setback in his life!

WE'RE LOOKING FOR A FEW GOOD MEN...AND WOMEN TOO!!

Believe it or not DIPCON XXII is only nine months away. And I'm already scared. In the last month or so I've spent almost as much time thinking about and planning for DIPCON as I have on DW. Hopefully that won't show too much. But, as the months move on that is going to be the case more and more. I can't recall a case before where two such important jobs were being handled by one at the same time. Frankly I need help. I need the help of the DW staff to carry even more of the DW load, and with even less guidance from me. I need volunteers to join the DC staff so that we can begin work on the best DIPCON ever. Some people feel that it is impossible for us to equal the job done at WORLD DIPCON this year and that we should accept that. I refuse to do so. However, I realize that unless I can mobilize you, all of you, to get behind our efforts we're not going to equal, let alone surpass WDC I in either quality or quantity.

I have some new, even radical, ideas about what DC should be like. I've put them together in a couple of documents. If you are interested in joining our staff they are yours for the asking. At this point we want to stimulate as much discussion as we can about cons in general, and DC in particular. Then, very soon, we'll start to make plans for next year's event. But keep in mind that if you don't volunteer to help now, and you don't get in on the planning, and you don't get actively involved in DC itself; I don't want to hear your complaints later. Frankly, I don't want to hear any more about the 1990 DIPCON or WORLD DIPCON II. Let's hear a bit more about DIPCON XXII.

In addition to your ideas, and your volunteering to join the DC staff, we need your financial support. That is the chief purpose for the Holiday Catalogue included in this issue: to help raise funds for DIPCON. After two weeks of visiting some 20 different hotels I can tell you that I haven't found any quads for $40.00 a night, especially with a swimming pool and golf course. So, if you didn't take advantage of what San Antonio offered, kick yourself. You have only yourself to blame. And start saving your pennies so you can come to San Diego next summer. In the meantime your purchases of the items offered or your donations of cash, goods, or services are needed. Needed badly, I might add.

But more important, I think, than anything else right now is a change of attitude on the part of the hobby. I know, from experience, that that is the hardest thing to pull off there is in the hobby. I know, sure as the sun rises over the Triumph Tower, that some people are going to not only passively but actively oppose what I am going to propose. Good. We need a good discussion. And I need a good fight. I've watched too many feud for too long about trivia. Now I want to see some constructive dialogue about something important. So, if you have an opinion let's hear it. If you don't, please keep your eyes, ears, and minds open. By the time next summer coms around I may have made a believer, and a Good Boy, out of you!

MELINDA ANN HOLLEY

Germany is located in the middle of the board. To me this is reminiscent of Germany can spread out in many directions and can influence just about any country on the board.

Conceivably Germany can pick up Holland and Denmark for two builds in 1901. France is not in Burgundy and there are no armies in Tyrolia or Silesia, Germany m also pick up Belgium in 1901. This action, however, could possibly upset both Fran and England, even if they are at war. Someone is bound to point out to them (and t idea probably would occur to each of them independently) that a six center German in 1902 could be a powerful threat to each of them. The smart move here, unless you are very sure you will be able to deal with the possible alliance, is to allow your ally (either France or England) to take Belgii and you be satisfied with two builds. However, if France is menaced by an Englis fleet in the English Channel or an Italian army in Piedmont (or if Russia has open you may be able to convince your ally to allow you to take Belgium, thus denying: to the enemy. There is always the question of whether or not to open to Denmark. By openia to Denmark, the German has a valuable diplomatic card to play in the east. He ca help another country (England, Austria, or Turkey...whoever Russia is attacking) l denying Russia a build by bouncing him in Sweden in Fall 1901. Conversely, he ca to St.Petersburg, thereby threatening England's ability to take Norway in Fall 1901 do Russia a favor by not bouncing him (and possibly angering another power). Unles Germany feels ready to deal with an irrate Russia in 1902 or is more than reasonab confident that Russia will not be able to retaliate for the bounce, there is litt reason to bounce Russia in Sweden unless Russia's Spring 1901 moves are hostile t Germany or Germany wishes to curry favor with a third power. Generally speaking, Germany will ally with either France or England against th other. If Germany has allied with England against France then German support of Englan to Belgium in Fall 1901 is to be seriously considered. If Germany has convinced Franc to take Iberia in 1901, then Belgium is assured for the Anglo-German forces. (Th same suggestion coming from England would probably not work as France would not partic ularly want to see English armies on the continent.) The Anglo-German forces are the in a position to force Burgundy in 1902, especially if England is able to support himsel to the English Channel and threaten Brest and the Mid Atlantic. After France is eliminated (or significantly reduced so that attention can b turned elsewhere), Germany must decide whether to remain with his English ally or sta him. If he has not built fleets then he's better off to march his armies elsewhere Without naval support, England cannot be conquered. Germany could stab his Englis ally and take continental supply centers and then build fleets. However, this coul be very risky unless Russia is in a position to attack England in the north or Italy' fleets are moving northward to aid Germany. If Germany decides to remain with the German-English alliance, attention mus be focused on Russia if that country is still a viable power. A combined German-Englis attack on Russia could prove effective but they would have to move quickly and decisivel because they are going from the western edge of the board to the eastern theater Conceivably, if Russia is somewhat on the ropes, England and Germany could help hi out by sending England's forces into the Mediterranean and the German's forces mov either against Italy or Austria. Another option is for Germany and England to attack Russia first. Either the have formed what is called a Western Triple (Germany, England, and France) with th idea of stabbing France as soon as Russia is crippled or they have included Italy i the agreement to ensure France is too busy defending himself against a combined German English and Italian alliance to threaten them.

The German-Russian alliance is usually formed in response to a strong English-French alliance. Russia's interests are not well served to stand by and watch Germany fall to the English-French duo as he is likely to be England's next target. If possible, Germany would need to convince Italy to send at least one (if not more) units against France. This would force both England and France to fight on two fronts.

The German-French alliance usually targets England first. If conditions are right, the German-French alliance can take possession of the North Sea and prevent England from getting a build.

Spring 1901: GERMANY: Army Berlin-Kiel, Army Munich-Ruhr, Fleet Kiel-Denmark

FRANCE: Army Marseilles-Spain, Army Paris-Picardy, Fleet Brest-Channel

Fall 1901: GERMANY: Army Kiel-Denmark, Army Ruhr-Holland, Fleet Denmark-North Sea FRANCE: Army Spain-Portugal, Army Picardy-Belgium, Fleet English Channel

Supports German Fleet Denmark-North Sea.

If this succeeds, both Germany and France gain two builds (Belgium and Portugal for France; Denmark and Holland for Germany). In addition (and perhaps more importantly) England has lost control of the North Sea and kept to one build at the most (if he went for Norway). The German-French alliance has gained a strong position against England and can threaten England's home centers in 1902.

Of course, any German-French alliance has to deal with Burgundy. If time can be spent in doing so, a Spring 1901 stand-off in Burgundy gives the illusion of an up-coming war between Germany and France. This allows both Germany and France to tell England how much they want an alliance with him. You're likely to get some good advance information this way. However, such a stand-off could allow England to take Belgium if Germany isn't in Holland in Spring 1901 or if France has not opened Fleet Brest-Picardy.

Another stand-off which can buy Germany some security is to order Army Munich-Tyrolia in Spring 1901. Even if France has opened to Burgundy, Munich can still be covered. If Germany suspects a possible French-Italian alliance, he has protected Munich in the Fall of 1901. As a bonus, he has probably gained Austria's goodwill since Italy's opening to Tyrolia threatens him as well.

Naturally, the first Triple which comes to mind concerning Germany is the Western Triple. While this gives Germany freedom to move against the east with allies on either side of him, it also puts Germany in the middle between England and France. Not only is Germany caught in the middle, both his allies are to his rear. A watchful eye must be turned in that direction at all times.

In the Western Triple, Germany allies with England against Russia and with France against Italy. The Western Triple is usually formed in response to a strong Russian-Turkish alliance. Therefore, opening moves could look something like this:

Spring 1901: GERMANY: Army Berlin-Kiel, Army Munich-Tyrolia, Fleet Kiel-Denmark ENGLAND: Army Liverpool-Edinburgh, Fleet London-North Sea, Fleet

Edinburgh-Norwegian

Fall 1901: GERMANY: Army Kiel-Holland, Fleet Denmark-Sweden, Army Tyrolia Supports FRENCH Army Piedmont-Venice

ENGLAND: Army Edinburgh-Norway, Fleet North Sea Convoy Edinburgh-Norway,

Fleet Norwegian Sea-Barents Sea

And pay particular note to the French orders in both seasons:

Spring 1901: FRANCE: Army Marseilles-Piedmont, Army Paris-Gascony, Fleet Brest-Mid Atlantic Ocean

Fall 1901: FRANCE: Army Piedmont-Venice, Army Gascony-Spain, Fleet Mid Atlantic Ocean-Portugal

In this scenario, all members gain builds (if Russia has opened Army Moscow-St.Petersburg, England may have to forgo moving to the Barents Sea and support his convoy to Norway with the Fleet Norwegian). England can then pick up Belgium in 1902 for his next build (or be allowed by Germany to take Sweden in 1902 and allow Belgium to go to one of his partners for a 1902 build).

In the south, France and Germany are in good position to attack Italy by Fall 1901. In 1902 Germany can then support himself to Bohemia and pressure Vienna while France moves on Italy.

The Northern Triple consists of Germany, England, and Russia. Mutual contro of Scandinavia is essential here. Once that is determined (either by totally evacuating the area or retaining units in Denmark, Norway and Sweden respectively), a united norther front can sweep south. England and Germany can move against France while Russia and Germany march against Austria. Germany's presence in the Austrian-Italian theater can be quite detrimental to the southern powers.

As stated above, the question of Scandinavia will wreck this alliance quicker than anything else. Russia sees that St.Petersburg is vulnerable to an English stab. Germany sees that Denmark is threatened by a combined English-Russian attack. Englances sees that he could quickly be out-maneuvered and lose not only Norway but control of the North Sea as well. An early agreement must be reached (preferrably before Fall 1901). The best way to avoid a stab by any of the three powers is to evacuate Scandinavia in Spring 1902.

The Central Triple consists of Germany, Austria, and Italy. This allows the Central Powers to form a solid core and protect each other. It also allows Germany the option of operating in alliance with either England or France in 1901. My opinion is that it would be better to ally with France against England. French forces would be deployed north against England and a possible German-Italian attack in Fall 1904 or sometime in 1905 could prove quite a surprise to France.

One bonus to this triple is that it is a surprise triple. An Austrian-Italiar alliance is not unusual. But Germany's participation in this triple would come as a surprise since Germany would have been involved in the west until the time came for him to actively support the Austrian-Italian alliance.

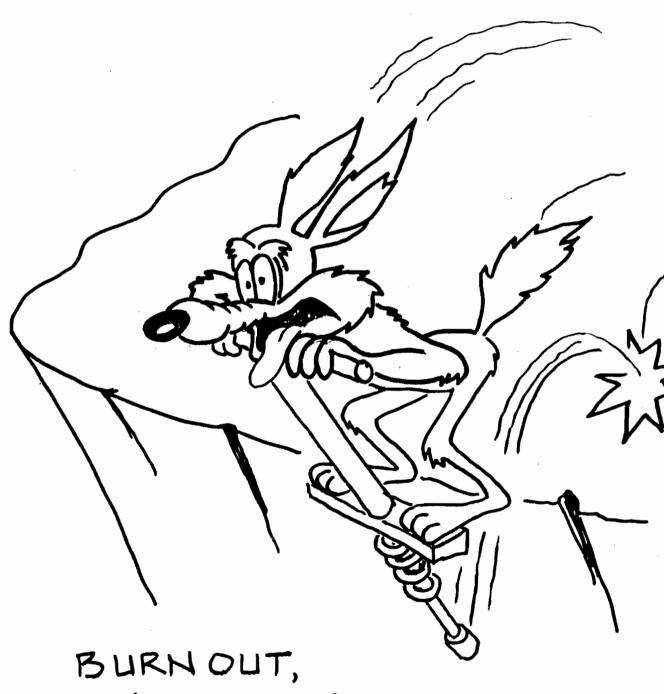

The one triple that Germany should beware of is the English-French-Russian triple. This triple can eliminate Germany very quickly. Russia opens to Silesia while France opens to Burgundy. In one game I participated in, Germany kept Munich by supporting himself back in but lost Berlin to a Russian move of Silesia-Berlin. That Russians unit then supported France to Munich in 1902 and proceeded to help the west eliminate Germany.

Germany's best strength is that, located in the middle, he can affect the play of other countries to a great degree. Germany's worst weakness is that, located in the middle, he is a tempting target for everybody in 1901 except Turkey.

Comments by Mark Berch

The Western Triple has had more written about it than any other Triple, in part because there are so many different ways it can start. See DIPLOMACY WORLD #25 for the "McKen jo Opening" with a very different approach. Melinda's approach is a little unusual, in that: 1) England takes an immediate anti-Russian stance of Fleet Norwegian-Barents without any help from Germany's army; 2) nobody takes Belgium; 3) the assault on Italy starts with Venice, rather then Tunis. Note that taking Portugal with the fleet means that this unit will see no anti-Italian action in 1902 either. Taken as a whole, this is a fairly high risk opening for Germany, since he is antagonizing Russia (in Sweden) and Italy, and there's a good chance Austria isn't going to like this opening either, unless Italy attacked Austria in Spring 1901. Still, it's playable, since Germany has allies in both areas. Germany, however, may want to ask France to settle for just one build, Fleet Marseilles. After all, if France is to attack Italy, a build of Army Paris will be useless, since the best it can do is move Paris-Cascony-Marseilles in 1902, and in Marseilles it would just block another French build in Winter 1902. The alternative second Winter 1901 build would be Fleet Brest, but England may be able If France agrees to building just one (and even that assumes Venice isn't taken); then Germany should suggest Fleet Mid Atlantic Convoy Army Gascony-Portugal for Fall 1901. That army will be used to take Spain in 1902, but he didn't have much use for the army under Melinda's opening any how. This frees the fleet for Fleet Mid Atlantic-West Mediterranean in Spring 1902. Keep in mind that if the German move of Army Munich-Tyrolia actually succeeded, it was probably because Italy opened Army Venice Hold, Army Rome-Apulia, and Fleet Naples-Ionian. In that case, the necessity of Army Apulia Supports Army Venice will lock Italy into Fleet Ionian-Tunis. Italy can then be expected to move Fleet Tunis-West Mediterranean in Spring 1902. Fleet Mid AtlanticWest Mediterranean can block that in Spring 1902. But if France has Fleet Portugal, as Melinda suggests, he will be unable to block Fleet Tunis-West mediterranean. If France wants to be even more aggressive, he can pass up the Fall 1901 convoy, and move Fleet Mid Atlantic-West Mediterranean, Army Cascony-Spain.

IT'S NOT THE FALL
IT'S THE SUDDEN STOP!

THE 1988 RUNESTONE POLL

Larry Peery

I hope Bruce Linsey makes it to next year's DIPCON. One of the things I want to do is have him sit down to Lt. Gen. Victor "Brut" Krulak, USMC Ret., and discuss the concept of "body count" and how it worked in Vietnam. Sometimes I feel Bruce uses it the same way in the Runestone Poll.

It's over. Again. The numbers are in. Over 500 voters, 71 zines, 27 subzines, and 58 CMs were evaluated——116 pages guaranteed to please, or offend, everybody. Still, there is nothing quite like it and it does offer a penetrating insight in the past year's hobby. I've long since ceased to worry about how Bruce runs the Poll (Does anyone really care how Mr. Blackstone picks his list of the 10 Worst Dressed Women?) or the scoring method (Does anyone really check all those numbers?). There is, as always, a wealth of info about all sorts of things: novice publications, hobby services, subzines, gamemasters, AIDS, lots of little awards, sub-polls, gurus, comets, voters list, voter analysis, the hobby health index, the contest results, the top ten news stories of the year, a questionnaire, an election '88 contest, and a list of the all-time finest Diplomacy publications.

The numbers pretty much tell the story and you can always provide your own editorial interpretation. DW came in fourth this year, up one from last year. Not bad, all things considered. We were beat our by PRAXIS, THE ZINE REGISTER, and PENGUIN DIP and each of those pubs had certain strengths that explain their strong showings. What I find disturbing is that 6 of the 107 people who voted for DW gave it a "O" and two gave it a "I" evaluation. I'd sure like to know who they were. I'll bet dollars to donuts that most of them were not DW subbers or readers. If, by chance, any of you were among those eight people I'd like to hear it from you why you gave DW such a low ranking. Perhaps it is something we can correct. And if any of you eight would like to volunteer to join the DW staff I'd be glad to hear about that. I don't know who the two people were who voted for me in the GM Poll and a "9" and a "10" do seem a bit high considering I haven't GMed a postal game in years and my last FIF GMing experienc resembled the gunfight at OK Corral. But bless you just the same. As for Bruce listing me as the hobby's number one guru; that's probably more a jab at my rotundness than anything else. And yes, I do think DW #50 was the second most important hobby story of the year. And so it goes.

As always there were new stars and shining lights and some fast falls for some old "comets." But unfortunately I don't think Bruce had the nerve to tell it like it is. The truth, based on what I've seen in the past year, is that the quality of American (both U.S. and Canadian) hobby publications has, in general, has continued to decline. The numbers, in part, say it, but the words make it meaningful. The fact is that the British hobby, about the same size as ours, has far more better magazines. And even the Australian hobby, far smaller than ours, has more good magazines. Oh, fancy graphics and bitter-sweet writing give our publications a certain verve, but most of them lack substance. It is so easy, and so popular to pander to the tastes of the masses. It's an easy road to travel. Just ask George and Mike. But, alas, it isn't doing the hobby any good. Not a bit. And, in the long run, we're going to pay for it. I'll be blunt. My votes in this year's Poll were the lowest I have cast in years. Only a handful of nines and tens, with fives and sixes far and away the biggest numbers I used. It's sad, but it's true.

Frankly, I don't think anyone should be bragging about the results of this year's Runestone Poll. I think it should give us all cause to pause and think seriously about where we, as a hobby, are and where we are going. If you will, consider this year's Runestone Poll results the same as you would the first pains in get your chest at night—a night on which you didn't have pizza for dinner.

Think about it.

DELTA LIST:ISSUE

The Delta List lists materials from DW 1-49 by issue number order. This preserves our sense of historical continuity; something most of you may not think important but which I believe is vital to our future growth. For instance you will note that Lew Pulsipher contributed an article to DW #1. Actually it was a variant game called Middle Earth V. Big deal. But you will also note that Lew contributed an article to DW #39 called Varieties of Diplomacy Players. And in between Lew was one of DW's biggest contributors. Today he's gone on to bigger and better things. Avalon Hill now offers his own game, BRITANNIA.

There have been 49 regularly numbered issues of DIPLOMACY WORLD to date.

Issues 1 - 15 were published by Walt Buchanan.

Issues 16-20 were published by Conrad von Metzke.

Issues 21- 27 were published by Jerry Jones.

Issues 28-38 were published by Rod Walker.

Issue 39 was published by Geo. Graessle, Kathy Byrne, and Rod Walker.

Issues 40-49 were published by Larry Peery.

In addition there have been 4 specially numbered issues of DIPLOMACY WORLD published by Larry Peery: 41.5, the all women's issue, and 42.1, 42.2, and 42.3, the three DIPCON XIX mini-issues.

Walt published his issues on an every over month schedule. von Metzke, Jones, and Walker tried for a quarterly schedule but that was more often a hope than an achievement. The size of issues has also grown over the years from about 40 pages per issue during Walt's day to 60 or more today. Some of the early Peery issues included over 100 pages of material, including a variety of inserts and special materials. More recently DW seems to be taking on some of the look of the old DW issues.

Again, if you are interested in obtaining a complete reprinting of all DWs you can do so. Reprints are done from the originals and two pages of each issue appears on one legal size sheet. Everything from cover to cover is included and the complete package include some 2,000 pages of material and weighs about 20 pounds. Selected back issues from the Buchanan, Jones, Walker, and Peery periods are available.

Anyone who has back issues of DW and no longer requires them for their own uses is welcome to donate them to the Archives or DW for resale or donation to other Archives.

WHO HOLDS THE DESTINY OF MANKIND IN HIS HANDS?

That man could be YOU!

It's easy enough to find out!

Play KREMLIN, the delightful satire of Soviet power politics! "Journey to Moscow" to experience first hand a humorous, behind-the-scenes look at the intrigue, double-dealing, back-stabbing and outright paranoia that has characterized the Soviet Politburo throughout history.

KREMLIN is a satirical study of power politics in its rawest form. Here, YOU can plot your rise from the ranks of the people to Candidate and then on to the Polithuro itself

No one is safe in this diabolical game of power grabbing. Your staunchest ally may have one foot in a rival camp.

Here, you have the opportunity to prove to everyone how devious a person you really are. He who is clever enough to rise to the top truly holds the destiny of mankind in his hands.

Isn't it worth a trip to your favorite game store?

KREMLIN for 3 to 6 devious players, ages 12 and up.

Only $20 at better game stores everywhere. If not available locally, you may order direct, adding 10% for postage and handling (foreign add 30%).
